

Food Industry Careers

Food For Thought !

Did you know that the food retail and wholesale industry is one of Canada's largest industries and growing?

With a workforce of over 500,000 dedicated men and women and the opportunity to work at the store, corporate and regional levels, there are more reasons than ever to embark upon a job or career in the food retail and wholesale industry.

Careers currently in demand include Management, Pharmacy, Floristry, Bakery, Deli and Meat. The need for qualified employees is greater than ever.

The industry offers flexible hours, competitive wages, job and income security, excellent benefits, long-term pensions, career opportunities and a strong policy to promote from within.

We're looking for individuals who have a desire to interact with the public, love food and bring a can-do attitude.

Did you know.....

that many of today's supermarket managers and executives started their careers by bagging or ringing up groceries?

"Many people think they're just taking a part-time job and discover they've found a career."

Cheryl Paradowski, Executive Director
Canadian Food Industry Council (CFIC)

Store Operations Is A Place Where Many Careers Are Made

Whether you eventually want to work behind a desk or in a store, starting from the ground floor up is the best way to get there.

Many of the industry's store employees have worked their way up to careers in food safety, real estate, advertising, store design, finance, information technology, marketing, franchise operations, merchandising and human resources to name but a few opportunities forgotten.

"The experience and skills that I developed on the floor enabled me to be prepared for my new job in Marketing."

James, who works in marketing
Loblaws Limited
